When should families contact
Bath Family Law?

When should I reach out?

Please get in touch if you want information on the separation process or to discuss your legal options. This can be when you first consider breaking-up, for additional support if proceedings have already begun, or if you need some guidance to finalise an agreement. Support from Bath Family Law can sit alongside professional mediation or counselling so you can reach out at every stage of your separation.

How do I contact Bath Family Law?

Support is available 24/7 – simply head to our website bathfamilylaw.co.uk and click on the Get Started button. After you fill out a few details in our client referral form, your enquiry will be triaged by a member of our team who will also send you a link to our Family Law calendar. You can then book a FREE initial consultation at your preferred date and time - this can be in-person at our city centre office, by telephone or via an online confidential TEAMS chat.

Alternatively, you can call us on 01225 941222 and we can book you in manually.

What does it cost?

Absolutely nothing! Bath Family Law is a purpose-led business and we don't believe in gatekeeping information. Your initial consultation is completely FREE. Not only that, Bath Family Law will send you a Summary and Proposal following your meeting which clearly explains your options and includes a no-obligation quote.

What if I'm at risk of harm?

If you or your children are in danger, please contact us urgently by email urgent@bathfamilylaw.co.uk or on 01225 941222. Bath Family Law will act immediately and can assist you to place applications for emergency protective orders to secure the safety of you and your children.

Do I have to be in Bath?

No. Bath Family Law can help families across the UK via TEAMS video chats, telephone calls and email. Wherever you are, please don't hesitate to reach out for support.

How do I start the support?

Say YES to your Summary and Proposal and our team will set you up in our system and start supporting you on your journey to resolution.
